

“she glo(w)s”

Rosemary Leitch, M.D. | Doctor For Women

Rosemary Leitch, MD, an ob/gyn who started her medical career when very few women were physicians, was once the quintessential country doctor, having first practiced in the Collingwood Blue Mountain ski area in Pennsylvania. “I loved driving to my office down the country roads through farms and little towns.” She began practicing in Fort Wayne in 1987 and today enjoys being in a small office where she can look after multiple generations of the same family. One of her ovarian cancer patients, after surgery and chemo three years ago, is “doing exceptionally well with no sign of disease. We all benefit from her positive attitude and her spirit to more than just survive but to flourish!” Leitch is most proud of “the beautiful babies that I have been privileged to deliver. When traveling through town, I often meet the families and get to see the babies I have delivered as they grow up. Admittedly, the little boys often look embarrassed to meet the MD who delivered them!”

Written by Barb Sieminski, Feature Writer | Photo by Karrine Williams, Feature Photographer